The society constitutes a center around which may meet all those who are interested in and devote their attention to the ancient history and the archaeology of the New World, to submit their work and make known the results of their investigations and discoveries. The existence and work of the society has given an impetus to both public and private scientific missions in the two Americas. The monuments and the

FRANK M'KEWAN IS PAINTED AS A HERO

Reports Told of Brave Act at Canning Factory Yesterday—Rumor Denied.

Yesterday a report was current that Frank McKewan of Ruger avenue, engineer at the canning factory of P. Hochmadel, Jr., had proved himself a hero. Rumor had it that while he was engaged in making some repairs on the boiler the engine became disordered. Noticing the trouble and fearing an accident that might result in the injury of much machinery and possibly the wrecking of the engine he jumped to the floor to quickly shut off the steam. In alighting he sprained his ankle, but crawled to the steam valve and closed it just in the nick of time. A phone message to the factory today failed to confirm this report. Superintendent Belharz stating that McKewan sprained his ankle in jumping from the boiler, but that no damage was at any time threatened.

LEAGUE CONVENTION WILL NAME HEARST

Independence Society Meeting in New York Will Nominate Journalist for Governor.

New York, Sept. 10.—Those in charge of the arrangements for the Independence league convention to be held in Carnegie hall tomorrow to name William R. Hearst for governor met today and completed the final details for the gathering. According to Max Johnson, chairman of the Independence league state committee and who has been the political manager of Hearst ever since the young editor first staked his claim into the arena of politics, everything has been nicely arranged for the gathering, which is to be marked by an attendance and display of enthusiasm calculated to impress the people with a correct idea of the genuineness and strength of the public demand that Mr. Hearst become a nominee for governor of New York. In addition to naming Mr. Hearst it is the intention of the league managers to put up a full state ticket composed of republicans and democrats. The nomination of Mr. Hearst at this early stage of the game is regarded in political circles as one of the cleverest moves ever made by the astute Mr. Johnson as it may naturally be expected to influence the democratic primaries which are yet to be held throughout the state.

OHIO REPUBLICANS HAVE A SCYLLA AND CHARYBDIS

They Must Endorse The President And Still Not Condemn Senator Foraker, Opponent Of Rate Legislation.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Dayton, O., Sept. 10.—The republican state convention to assemble here tomorrow is the talk of the hour. The party leaders have already begun to arrive. The indications point to a large crowd, though, so far as delegates are concerned, it will be the smallest republican convention held in Ohio for many years. This is because of the light vote cast for Governor Herrick last fall.
The convention will be a two days' affair. The initial session will be held late tomorrow afternoon, after the district meetings for the selection of vice-presidents and members of committees have been held. The opening session will be limited to hearing the keynote speech of former Governor Herrick, who will be temporary chairman. The actual business of the convention will begin at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning.
The convention will name candidates for minor state offices, from secretary of state down. No governor is chosen this year. The most of the present state officers are candidates for re-election, leaving but two places on the ticket for which there are contests—the nomination for secretary of state and that for state dairy and food commissioner. The nomination for secretary of state is, of course, the most important and consequently is attracting the most attention. The candidates are numerous, but Carmi A. Thompson of Ironton, speaker of the general assembly, and State Senator B. F. Wirt of Youngstown appear to be in the lead.
But of more general interest than the nominations will be the resolutions passed by the convention. The importance of the railway rate legislation, the position of President Roosevelt on that matter, the action of Senator Foraker in opposing the measure, with his voice and vote, make this a most important matter. How to endorse one senator and not condemn the other, how to endorse the President with sufficient definiteness and not condemn Senator Foraker and how to suit the admirers of the President and those who differ with his policy, offers a Scylla and Charybdis proposition to the platform builders, the like of which has not been handed to them recently in Ohio.
But the party leaders have recently been working industriously in the interest of harmony, and the probabilities are that the problem will be solved in a manner that will be satisfactory to nearly everyone. If Senators Foraker and Dick ever seriously planned to prevent the convention from endorsing President Roosevelt they long since abandoned the idea. The way the President's followers took up the gauntlet of battle, led there are contests—the nomination for secretary of state and that for state dairy and food commissioner. The nomination for secretary of state is, of course, the most important and consequently is attracting the most attention. The candidates are numerous, but Carmi A. Thompson of Ironton, speaker of the general assembly, and State Senator B. F. Wirt of Youngstown appear to be in the lead.
The Roosevelt administration will receive sincere and enthusiastic endorsement is a foregone conclusion. Even Senator Dick is a party to this prediction, and no one knows better what the platform will consist of than the junior senator.

FIVE STATE FAIRS WILL BE HELD DURING WEEK

Badgers Flocking To Milwaukee For Their Annual Exposition—Good Racing Programs.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 10.—The annual exhibition of the Wisconsin State Fair association opened today with an attendance as large as ever recorded before for a fine day. The fair this year is more elaborate than ever, and the live stock show, the horse show, the poultry show and the display of choice exhibits in the agricultural, horticultural and manufacturing departments are the most complete ever offered by the state fair here. In the agricultural and horticultural departments, especially, the displays are numerous and embrace everything grown on farm, garden and orchard. The racing events promise to be first class. The city presents a holiday appearance and is already filling with visitors from various parts of the state.

Oregon State Fair
Salem, Ore., Sept. 10.—What the management declares to be the "biggest, busiest and best" state fair ever held in Oregon opened today under the most favorable auspices. The exhibits in all departments are of the finest, especially the agricultural display, while in the stock department the pens are crowded with animals.
The speed program this year is better than that offered in any previous year. Two $2,500 stakes are offered, two $1,000 stakes, and a half a dozen for smaller purses. The stables are filled with fast horses and the outlook is bright for some successful racing.

State Fair at Topeka
Topeka, Kas., Sept. 10.—The Kansas State exposition was formally opened today under auspicious conditions. For months past the management has been working hard to make the exhibits of more than ordinary interest this year and the result is the biggest and best collection of agricultural, horticultural, and live stock exhibits ever shown in this state. The amusement features also are above the average and the racing program provides the largest purses ever offered in Kansas. The fair will continue until the end of the week and the early indications point to a large attendance of visitors from all parts of Kansas and from Missouri, Nebraska, Oklahoma and other states.

Interstate Live Stock Show
Sioux City, Ia., Sept. 10.—From all parts of the west and northwest visitors are arriving in Sioux City to attend the big Interstate Live Stock fair, which was formally opened today. In the number and class of exhibits the fair this year is fully up to the high standard established by the previous exhibitions held here. Sixteen thousand dollars in purses are offered for the races to be conducted in conjunction with the fair.

STUDY BY MAIL

AT UNIVERSITY

EXTENSION DEPARTMENT OF
WISCONSIN IN OPERATION.

MANY COURSES OFFERED

Success of Agricultural School is Responsible for New Branch of Work.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Sept. 10.—The remarkable success of the college of agriculture of the University of Wisconsin in helping the farmers of the state with the solution of their practical problems has led President Van Hise and the state university regents to extend the same methods of instruction to the man in the shop, the clerk, bookkeeper, housekeeper, teacher, and to wage-earners of every class who are unable to attend college so that they may increase their practical knowledge and their opportunities for advancement. This extension work of the university will be done through correspondence courses which will be simple and practical, and will be given at a cost so low as to just cover the expense of maintenance. It is planned to have these correspondence courses fit into the regular courses of the university in such a way as to inspire young men and women with an ambition to continue study at Madison and fit themselves for still higher positions.

Many Courses Offered.

The schedule arranged for this work has been planned with a view to meeting, as far as possible, all demands that may be made upon the department. Courses in mathematics, languages, history, English and literature, politics and economics, education and philosophy, business methods, engineering, will be included in the instruction given. Of particular interest to public officials, in both municipal and rural districts, is the course on highway construction to be given by W. O. Hotchkiss, of the geology department of the university,
who has been making special investigations throughout the state in the summer regarding the construction and maintenance of good roads. His course includes a consideration of both country roads and city streets,
their construction, drainage, bridges, culverts, and a detailed study of the merits of various paving materials.

Work in Business Administration.

Fifteen courses in business administration are offered by the department of political economy. These include subjects fundamental in all business activities: courses in business forms, correspondence, organization, and management, financial and factory accounting, with a study of the cost of production,
office appliances and systems, advertising, salesmanship, buying, credits
and collections, financial operations,
and a general course on the practical problems of business management.

Every one of the thirty students who was graduated from the regular university course in business administration last June secured a good position before receiving his diploma, and large business houses sent more requests for such graduates than could be satisfied.

The department of political economy has prepared three courses, each of forty weekly lessons, including the elements of political economy, transportation, and the labor movement, and socialism. The first course will give a general survey of the fundamental principles, with a discussion of leading economic problems, as trusts, taxation, trade unions, railroads, money and banking. In the second course the relation of the railroads to other branches of industrial life will be considered, with the growth of the present system, combination, rates and fares, discriminations, and public regulation. Considerable attention will be given state and federal legislation and recent court decisions on railroad questions.

The growth, policies, and methods of labor organizations, the conditions of employment, the trend of wages, public activity in behalf of the workers, and finally the significance of the socialist's appeal to the laboring classes, are to be considered in the third course.

The elements of political science will be treated in five courses. One course will devote twenty weeks to the organization, methods, and government of national government, and day problems of national government and a similar time to American states and municipalities and their problems. A second course will treat of the law of journalism and business,

a third legislative and political parties,
a fourth American diplomacy and world politics, and a fifth, constitutional and institutional law.

Individual instruction.

All courses will be so related and adjusted as to meet the need of the individual worker, and the instructors
at Madison will give personal attention to each student in a way that is not always possible in large classes in an institution. Each student will be assisted in finding the course best suited to his needs. The local centers for the work will generally be in the libraries and schools of the various communities, and when possible students will be gathered there by the teachers and study leaders for conference and discussion.

Correspondence Work Successful.

Those who have not kept in touch with the recent remarkable development of correspondence work will be surprised to find how much practical instruction can be given by well-planned courses. One difficulty in pushing the new movement lies in the fact that thousands of people who approve the general plan, fail to make a personal application of the principle.

Effort is therefore being made to bring the new work to the notice of those for whose instruction it is designed. It is the purpose to call the attention of many clerks in stores to the fact that the university has courses teaching the very things they need to become good merchants, and to young women stenographers in law offices the fact that by a study of the latest office methods and appliances they can easily save much of their employers' time, and double their own earning capacity, as well as increasing their pleasure in their daily duties. Extensive courses are also planned for the better known branches of university instruction, such as language, literature, history, and the sciences.

NINETEEN THREE WAS

BANNER LEAF YEAR

Statistics for Production During Past
Five Years Are Now Available.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 8.—The statistics for the world's tobacco production for the five years ending with 1904 are now available, and some instructive comparisons may be drawn.
The total production for the world
for the years mentioned, was, 1900,
2,201,193,000 pounds; 1901, 2,153,820,
000; 1902, 2,206,050,000; 1903, 2,222,
503,000; and 1904, 2,046,817,000 pounds.

The banner year seems to have been 1902. The United States produced more than one-fifth of the entire production of all tobacco-growing countries. The total product of the United States (including the Philippine Islands) was, 1900, 855,445,000 pounds;
1901, 865,563,000; 1902, 867,228,000;
1903, 867,872,000; and 1904, 709,561,
000 pounds. It will be seen that the 900 pounds. It will be seen that the production in the United States in 1904 was more than 150,000,000

pounds short of what it had been in
pounds short of the previous years of the period mentioned. It is well known that the average planted in 1904 in the United States was much smaller than
it had been for several years, but
that accounts only in part for the great falling off in production.

Let us take Cuba as another illustration of the fluctuations in the tobacco crop. In 1900, Cuba produced 54,000,000 pounds; in 1901, 45,592,000;

in 1902, 57,177,000; in 1903, 57,700,000;
and in 1904, 45,748,000 pounds. Hungary
affords a still more striking example
of fluctuations in the crop. In 1900
that country produced 132,100,000
pounds; 1901, 125,334,000; 1902, 99,
228,000; 1903, 124,567,000; and in 1904,
85,768,000 pounds.

The production in Brazil and in British India has been about the same, averaging, in the former country, about 55,000,000 pounds, and in the latter, 441,000,000 pounds yearly.

Next to the United States British India is the greatest tobacco-producing country. Russia is the third, with a total production in 1900, 158,000,000
pounds; 1901, 136,650,000; 1902, 222,
767,000; 1903, 174,000,000; and in 1904,
174,000,000 pounds.

Tobacco culture is rapidly increasing in the island of Japan, and that country may in the near future become a large exporter. The production in Japan has grown from 89,671,
000 pounds in 1900, to 105,853,000
pounds in 1904.

Summarized in geographical divisions the tobacco production for the

five years follows:
North America—1900, 907,748,000
pounds; 1901, 911,266,000; 1902, 919, 125,000; 1903, 899,316,000; 1904, 751,
227,000 pounds.

British India—An average of 441,
000,000 pounds yearly.

Dutch East Indies—1900, 92,918,000
pounds; 1901, 70,662,000; 1902, 105,
144,000; 1903, 110,158,000; 1904, 96,
100,000 pounds.

WEATHER VARIED IN

MONTH OF AUGUST

Pleasant, Disagreeably Wet and Disagreeably Hot Spells Followed in Quick Succession.

During August Janesville was given tastes of many different and varied kinds of weather. There was a wet season and a dry season, a cool spell and a hot, very hot, spell, and one stretch of weather that proved pleasant. The latter, contained just enough rain and the nights were cool enough to make living comfortable. On the contrary, the big storm did considerable damage and life for one week was made miserable by the extremely high temperature. Withal the crops fared well. Corn, such as has not been seen in years is now ripening and one of the finest crops of tobacco ever raised is nearly all in shed. The following table of temperatures and more information concerning the month's weather, the average hangout of the mercury being 73.2, while the high average was 80.1 and the low average 66.8.

NINETEEN THREE WAS

BANNER LEAF YEAR

Statistics for Production During Past
Five Years Are Now Available.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 8.—The
statistics for the world's tobacco production for the five years ending with 1904 are now available, and some instructive comparisons may be drawn.
The total production for the world
for the years mentioned, was, 1900,
2,201,193,000 pounds; 1901, 2,153,820,
000; 1902, 2,206,050,000; 1903, 2,222,
503,000; and 1904, 2,046,817,000 pounds.

The banner year seems to have been
1902. The United States produced
more than one-fifth of the entire production of all tobacco-growing countries. The total product of the United States (including the Philippine Islands) was, 1900, 855,445,000 pounds;
1901, 865,563,000; 1902, 867,228,000;
1903, 867,872,000; and 1904, 709,561,
000 pounds. It will be seen that the 900 pounds. It will be seen that the production in the United States in 1904 was more than 150,000,000

pounds short of what it had been in
pounds short of the previous years of the period mentioned. It is well known that the average planted in 1904 in the United States was much smaller than
it had been for several years, but
that accounts only in part for the
great falling off in production.

Let us take Cuba as another illustration of the fluctuations in the tobacco crop. In 1900, Cuba produced
54,000,000 pounds; in 1901, 45,592,000;
in 1902, 57,177,000; in 1903, 57,700,000;
and in 1904, 45,748,000 pounds. Hungary
affords a still more striking example
of fluctuations in the crop. In 1900
that country produced 132,100,000
pounds; 1901, 125,334,000; 1902, 99,
228,000; 1903, 124,567,000; and in 1904,
85,768,000 pounds.

The production in Brazil and in British India has been about the
same, averaging, in the former country, about 55,000,000 pounds, and in
the latter, 441,000,000 pounds yearly.

Next to the United States British India is the greatest tobacco-producing country. Russia is the third, with a total production in 1900, 158,000,000
pounds; 1901, 136,650,000; 1902, 222,
767,000; 1903, 174,000,000; and in 1904,
174,000,000 pounds.

Tobacco culture is rapidly increasing in the island of Japan, and that
country may in the near future be-
come a large exporter. The production in Japan has grown from 89,671,
000 pounds in 1900, to 105,853,000
pounds in 1904.

Summarized in geographical divisions the tobacco production for the

five years follows:
North America—1900, 907,748,000
pounds; 1901, 911,266,000; 1902, 919,
125,000; 1903, 899,316,000; 1904, 751,
227,000 pounds.

British India—An average of 441,
000,000 pounds yearly.

Dutch East Indies—1900, 92,918,000
pounds; 1901, 70,662,000; 1902, 105,
144,000; 1903, 110,158,000; 1904, 96,
100,000 pounds.

pounds; 1901, 65,556,000; 1902, 70,

075,000 pounds.

Fatal Duel—A duel was fought at Little Rock, Ark., yesterday, between Walter Cogswell, postmaster at Wayne, and J. T. Wright, editor of the Wayne Gazette. Their weapons were swords—the cause, jealousy. Both were frightfully mangled, having fought until the loss of blood caused them to faint. Both will die.

Good dwellings are not to be rented in this city. We know a good many families that would be glad to rent a house, but there are none to be had. In Toledo, Ohio, they have formed a house building association with a capital of $100,000, for the purpose of erecting dwellings to rent. Something of the sort ought to be done here.

S.S.S. KILLS THE GERMS OF SCROFULA

The laws of nature and heredity are fixed and invariable. Parents who are related by the ties of blood, or who have a consumptive tendency, or family blood taint, are sure to transmit it to their children in the form of Scrofula. Swollen glands, brittle bones, weak eyes, hip disease, pale, waxy complexions, emaciated bodies, running sores and ulcers, and general weak constitutions are the principal ways in which the disease is manifested. Those who have inherited this blighting trouble may succeed in holding it in check during young, vigorous life; but after a spell of sickness, or when the system has begun to weaken and lose its natural vitality, the ravages of the disease will become manifest and sometimes run into Consumption. S. S. S. goes down into the circulation and forces out the scrofulous deposits, kills the germs and completely cures the disease. It changes the quality of the blood by removing all impurities and poisons and supplying this vital fluid with rich, health-sustaining qualities. S. S. S. is a purely vegetable medicine and is especially adapted to systems which have been weakened and poorly nourished by scrofulous blood. Literature on Scrofula and medical advice free.

DEAR MONEY

In a recent issue the Wall Street Journal explains what is meant by "Dear Money." The high call money rates which prevailed during the past week, during the preceding April and in December of last year, were caused partly by a demand for accommodations in excess of the loaning capacity of the banks without encroaching upon their reserves.

The willingness of borrowers to pay the rates and of bankers to make the loans was founded upon the belief that appreciation in values would be sufficient to enable the loans to be met without loss. In other words, there was and is everywhere great confidence in the future prosperity of the United States.

There is a great difference in the moral effect of high money rates caused by exuberant confidence and of equally high rates caused by lack of confidence and a state of panic. In time of panic the leading banks have combined to offer $30,000,000, or even $50,000,000, to be loaned on the Stock Exchange at the market in order to check the wanton sacrifice of securities. There has been no thought of such combinations during the past twelve months, even when call money touched 125 per cent last December.

But the physical effects of exorbitant rates for money, whether caused by excess or lack of confidence are very much the same, as many people discovered last January, when they found their paper profits sadly diminished by the rates of interest which their brokers had paid and were compelled by the rules of the Stock Exchange to charge to their customers.

Abnormally high rates for call money are a signal of danger impending when they are caused by too great confidence. They are evidences of calamity existing when caused by panic.

It is fortunate that under existing revenue laws a period of great prosperity in business, when confidence in the future is greatest, is also a period when money is accumulating in the treasury of the United States, which the secretary of the treasury is authorized by law to deposit in national banks for the relief of the monetary situation when needed.

BLOOD WILL TELL?

Since the failure of the great trust company in Philadelphia the students in heredity have been busy framing parallels between the characters of Frank H. Hipple, its president, and the late Senator Mitchell of Oregon, says the Madison Democrat. It is said they were cousins, a claim probably true. So far as the investigations have been made public it looks as if a strong argument is being built up to support the theory that bad blood will tell. The world long ago accepted the potency of good blood, but has steadily fought the influence of the reverse. The New York World asks if it is anything more than a coincidence that Frank H. Hipple, president of the real estate trust of Philadelphia, and Senator John Hipple Mitchell of Oregon, in his youth plain John Hipple of Pennsylvania, should have ended long careers of honor and trust in criminal money dealings. The two men, far apart in their ambitions and activities, are said to have been cousins. Was there some taint in the blood that led them toward crime and disgrace?

John Hipple left Pennsylvania in 1860 for the Pacific coast for domestic reasons. He added the name of Mitchell in Oregon. Then he practiced law, entered politics and was elected to the United States senate for a number of terms. No suspicion lay against him. But at the age of seventy he was convicted last summer in connection with western land frauds against the government of which he was an officer and sentenced to serve six months in jail. Death unexpectedly saved him from that last shame.

Frank H. Hipple had risen to the front rank of Philadelphia financiers. He was a pillar of the church, trustee and treasurer of its funds, a man of unquestioned probity. His secret transactions were not even suspected by his closest associates. Last week, without apparent cause, he killed himself. When well past sixty he had not only wrecked the trust company of which he was president but embarrassed its funds.

Between these two cousins, both of whom ended badly in spite of splendid opportunities for worthy success, it is not even known that there existed a casual acquaintance. Their lines were cast in different places and separate pursuits. But the same failure and the same moral appear at the end of both misdirected lives.

It looks now as though that admission of the Milwaukee attorney who employed Cochems and McGee to aid him in defeating legislation in 1901 might have been used to advantage before the primaries by their enemies had their defeat not been so certain.

Mayor Becker arrived in Milwaukee from an exhaustive automobile trip and immediately attended a ball game between the Chicago and Milwaukee common council members. Milwaukee lost, but a thousand dollars was added to its fund for its big convention hall.

The Milwaukee Free Press continues to talk about what it has done. It beat McGovern and Cochems for one thing, but it never mentioned that fact.

Senator Spooner offered his services to Governor Davidson as a campaign speaker and immediately William Jennings Bryan and Governor Folk offered aid to Ayward.

The Milwaukee Free Press is badly hit by the defeat of McGovern. It makes their paper look like two cents, really now, in view of the suits brought by Charles Pfister.

La Follette is waiting for the platform committee to get through its work. When it does he will announce what he is going to do.

What promises to be the last stab of democracy to gain recognition in the politics of the state will be conducted this year.

Taft has again begun his crusade in the direction of the passage of the Philippine tariff measure.

Babcock's majority grew a little after the vote was counted.

HOBOS HOLDING AN ORGY ON RIVER BANK

Were Nabbed by the Police Officers Yesterday Afternoon—Drunks in Court.

At "the Willows" upriver about three o'clock yesterday afternoon City Marshal Appleby and Officer Brown took in tow a quartet of hard-looking hobos, who were enjoying a little keg party. The tramps were spilling for drink, but the officers, even had they been disposed to accommodate them, were not anxious to drag their quarry a mile to the city. They will be kept in the lock-up until they are good and anxious to leave Janesville in a hurry. In municipal court this morning Joseph Woletz, being unable to speak English, could enter no plea on a drunkenness charge and it will be necessary to secure an interpreter before his case can be disposed of. The action against Peter Linahan was adjourned two weeks in order to give him the opportunity to secure sufficient cash to pay a fine of $2 and costs. Thomas Nash paid a fine and costs amounting to $4.10 and exerts are being made to pay Leo Rooney's fine of $1 and costs.

FIVE WOMEN SAVED HIM FROM DROWNING

Dr. Bushong, Catcher of Old Janesville Mutuals, Nearly Lost in Being a Hero.

Dr. A. J. Bushong of Brooklyn, the former well-known professional baseball catcher of the victorious St. Louis Browns in the latter '90s and previously catcher on the famous old "Janesville Mutuals," nearly lost his life while trying to rescue a drowning woman at Thirty-third street, Ocean City, N. J., Saturday afternoon. When Dr. Bushong went to the woman's assistance the tide was flowing swiftly, and Bushong had all he could do to care for himself. His two sons, swam to their father, and were followed by Mercur Reese. The tide overpowered them all. Then Mrs. Charles Reinhardt, Miss Anna Reinhardt, Mrs. Reese, Miss Mary Powick and Miss Bushong, the latter a daughter of Dr. Bushong, formed a life line. Miss Bushong, being the tallest, went in first, and the water had reached her hips before she could grasp her father's hand. Then all the others caught hands and were brought ashore.

Bushong caught for the famous old Bower City team before gloves and masks were invented and stood behind the bat when the noted Johnnie Ward twirled.

President—Marguerite Fifield.
Vice-President—Eloise Fifield.
Secretary—Marcia Rogan.
Treasurer—Belle Sherer.

President—Will Spohn.
Vice-President—Will Poenichen.
Secretary—Douglas McKee.
Treasurer—Tacy Nott.

Football Enthusiasm.
Boys interested in football have also held a meeting. There was a large attendance and much enthusiasm was displayed. It this does not wane there is every prospect of a lively season. CHAPTER V

AND what do you intend to do with yourself?" asked Lady Cantourne when she had poured out tea. "You surely do not intend to mope in that dismal house in Russell square?"

"No, I shall let that I can." "Oh, you will have no difficulty in doing that. People live in Russell square again now, and try to make one believe that it is a fashionable quarter. Your father stayed on there because the carpets fitted the rooms, and on account of other ancestral conveniences. He did not live there. He knew nothing of his immediate environments. He lived in Phoenixia."

"Then," continued Guy Oscar, "I shall go abroad?"

"Ah! Will you have a second cup? Why will you go abroad?"

Guy Oscar paused for a moment. "I know an old hippopotamus in a certain African river who has twice upset me. I want to go back and shoot him."

"Don't go at once; that would be running away from it—not from the hippopotamus—from the request. It does not matter being upset in an African river; but you must not be upset in London by an inquest."

"I did not propose going at once," replied Guy Oscar, with a peculiar smile which Lady Cantourne thought she understood. "It will take me some time to set my affairs in order—the will and all that."

Lady Cantourne waited with perfectly suppressed curiosity, and while she was waiting Millicent Chyne came into the room. The girl was dressed with her habitual perfect taste and success, and she came forward with a smile of genuine pleasure, holding out a small hand nearly gloved in suede. Her ladyship was looking, not at Millicent, but at Guy Oscar.

"Ah!" said Miss Chyne. "It is very good of you to take pity upon two lone females. I was afraid that you had gone off to the wilds of America or somewhere in search of big game. Do you know, Mr. Oscar, you are quite a celebrity? I heard you called the 'big game man' the other day; also the 'travelling fellow'."

"The specimen smiled happily under this delicate handling."

"Mr. Oscar has just been telling me," intimated Lady Cantourne conversationally, "that he is thinking of going off to the wilds again."

"Then it is very disappointing of him," said Millicent, with a little droop of the eyelids which went home. "It seems to be only the uninteresting people who stay at home and live humdrum lives of enormous duration."

"He seems to think that his friends are going to cast him off because his poor father died without the assistance of a medical man," continued the old lady meekly.

At this moment another visitor was announced and presently made his appearance. He was an old gentleman of no personality whatever, who was nevertheless welcomed effusively because two people in the room had a distinct use for him. Lady Cantourne was exceedingly gracious. She remembered instantly that horticulture was among his somewhat antiquated accomplishments, and she was immediately consumed with a desire to show him the conservatory, which she had had built outside the drawing room window. She took a genuine interest in this abode of flowers and watered the plants herself with much enthusiasm when she remembered.

Added to a number of positive virtues the old gentleman possessed that of abstaining from tea, which enabled the two horticulturists to repair to the conservatory at once, leaving the young people alone at the other end of the drawing room.

Millicent smoothed her gloves with downcast eyes and that demure air by which the talented fair imply the consciousness of being alone and out of others' carol with an interesting member of the stronger sex.

Guy sat and watched the suede gloves with a certain sense of placid enjoyment. Then suddenly he spoke, continuing his remarks where they had been broken off by the advent of the useful old gentleman.

"You see," he said, "it is only natural that a great many people should give me the cold shoulder. My story was a little lame. There is no reason why they should believe in me."

"I believe in you," she answered.

"It was a very unpleasant business," he said in a jerky, self-conscious voice. "I didn't know that I was that sort of fellow. The temptation was very great. I nearly gave in and let him do it. He was a stronger man than I. You know—we did not get on well together. He always hoped that I would turn out a literary sort of fellow, and I suppose he was disappointed. I tried at one time, but I found it was no good. From indifference it turned almost to hatred. He disliked me intensely, and I am afraid I did not care for him very much."

Millicent was listening gravely without interrupting—like a man. She had the gift of adapting herself to her environments in a marked degree.

"And," he added curtly, "no one knows how much I wanted that three thousand a year."

The girl moved uneasily and glanced toward the conservatory.

"It was not the money that tempted me," said Guy very deliberately; "it was you."

She rose from her chair as if to join her hunt and the horticultural old gentleman.

"You must not say that," she said in little more than a whisper, and without looking round she went toward Lady Cantourne. Her eyes were gleaming with a singular suppressed excitement, such as one sees in the eyes of a man fresh from a mad run across country.

Guy Oscar rose also and followed more deliberately. There was nothing for him to do but take his leave.

"But," said Lady Cantourne graciously, "if you are determined to go away, you must at least come and say goodbye before you leave."

"Thanks, I should like to do so, if I may."

"We shall be deeply disappointed if you forget," said Millicent, holding out her hand, with a smile full of light heartedness, and innocent girlish friendship.

From the canoe there was an answer, but the man on the bank went to the water's edge, still carrying the rifle from which he was never parted.

Durnovo was the first to speak when the boat came within hail.

"Very sorry," he shouted. "Thought you were a native boat. Must establish a link—get in the first shot, you know."

"All right," replied one of the Europeans in the approaching craft, with a courteous wave of the hand, "no harm done."

There were two white men and six blacks in the long and clumsy boat. One of the Europeans lay in the bow while the other was stretched at his ease in the stern, reclining on the canvas of a neatly folded tent. The last named was evidently the leader of the last expedition, while the manner and attitude of the man in the bow suggested the servitude of a disciplined soldier slightly relaxed by abnormal circumstances.

"Who fired that shot?" inquired Durnovo, when there was no longer any necessity to shout.

"Joseph," replied the man in the stern of the boat, indicating his companion. "Was it a near thing?"

"About as near as I care about. It threw up the dust between my legs."

The man called Joseph grinned. Nature had given him liberality in that relaxation, and Durnovo smiled rather constrainedly. Joseph was grabbing at the long reedy grass, bringing the canoe to a standstill, and it was some moments before his extensive mouth submitted to control.

"I presume you are Mr. Durnovo?" said the man in the stern of the boat, rising leisurely from his recumbent position and speaking with a courteous savor, which seemed slightly out of place in the wilds of central Africa.

He was a tall man with a small aristocratic head and a refined face, which somehow suggested an aristocrat of old France.

"Yes," answered Durnovo.

The tall man stepped ashore and held out his hand.

"I am glad we have met you," he said. "I have a letter of introduction to you from Maurice Gordon of London."

Victor Durnovo's dark face changed slightly. His eyes, bilious, fever shot, unhealthily, took a new light.

"Ah!" he answered. "Are you a friend of Maurice Gordon's?"

There was another question in this, an unasked one, and Victor Durnovo was watching for the answer. But the face he watched was like a delicately carved piece of brown marble, with a courteous, imperious smile.

"I met him again the other day at London. He is an old Etonian, like myself."

This conveyed nothing to Durnovo, who belonged to a different world, whose education was, like other things about him, an unknown quantity.

"My name," continued the tall man, "is Meredith—John Meredith—some times called Jack."

They were walking up the bank toward the dusky and uninviting tent.

"And the other fellow?" inquired Durnovo, with a backward jerk of the head.

"Oh, he is my servant."

Durnovo raised his eyebrows in somewhat contemptuous amusement, and proceeded to open the letter which Meredith had handed him.

"Not many fellows," he said, "on this coast can afford to keep a European servant."

"I understand," answered Meredith, with a half-suppressed yawn, "that the country gets finer further up, more mountainous."

The proprietors of very dark eyes would do well to remember that it is dangerous to glance furtively to one side or the other. The attention of dark eyes is more easily led than the glances of gray or blue orbs.

Jack, Meredith's servant, was moved by the suspicious manner of Durnovo.

"There is no white man knows this river as I do, and I do not recommend it. Look at me, on the verge of jaundice, look at this wound on my arm, it began with a scratch, and has never healed. All that comes from a month up this cursed river. Take my advice. Try somewhere else."

"I certainly shall," replied Meredith. "We will discuss it after dinner. My chap is a first-rate cook. Have you got anything to add to the menu?"

"Not a thing. I've been living on plantains and dried elephant meat for the last fortnight."

"Doesn't sound nourishing. Well, we are pretty well provided, so perhaps you will give me the pleasure of your company to dinner? Come as you are; no ceremony. I think I will wash, though. It is as well to keep up these old customs."

Talk About Well Known Players

Careers of Catcher Gibson of Pittsburg and Grimshaw of Boston.

Gossip About the Cleveland Americans—Blues Need Armour.

Catcher George ("Mooney") Gibson of the Pittsburg National league club, is a native of London, Ont., is twenty-four years old and has had but three years of professional experience.

He graduated from the London City league in 1903 into Manager Stallings' Buffalo team, in which he played two years, helping it win the Eastern league championship in 1904. In 1905 he was transferred to Montreal to help

Cleveland is again clamoring for Bill Armour, the present manager of the Detroit Tigers. Regarding the situation a Cleveland authority says:

"What is the greatest need of the Cleveland ball club today?" "It is not a third baseman. It is not a first outfielder. It is not another star pitcher. It is not any of these things separately, though in a way this greatest necessity includes all of them."

"The Cleveland club's greatest need is for a man who knows good young ball players when he sees them and can go out into the minor leagues and pick up the real ones."

"If Charlie Somers is willing to spend $10,000 or $20,000 to capture that flag and we all believe he is, the best thing he could do would be to hire Bill Armour away from Detroit and let him do nothing but scout for new material."

"You've got to hand the title to William Reginald Armour, prize finder of young talent."

Myron Grimshaw, the Boston American league club's first baseman in 1905, was originally a catcher. Grimshaw is twenty-six years old and a native of Canajoharie, N. Y., where he still makes his home.

He began playing professional baseball with the London (Ont.) team in 1898, and the succeeding year he was with the Guelph club, from which he went to the "Huron" team of the New York league, where he batted with a percentage of .317 and helped correspondingly good.

After playing off a season he joined the Buffalo team in 1901, and when

FIRST BASEMAN MYRON GRIMSHAW, BOSTON AMERICANS.

Stallings went to Buffalo in 1903 he retained Grimshaw, utilizing him part of his first season as an outfielder. He was then tried at first base and became the Eastern league star in that position in 1904.

In the fall of 1904 he was purchased by the Boston American league club and displaced Jacobson at first base. His work at first fell below expectations, owing to ill health, but in the latter half of the season he played splendid ball, thus assuring his retention for 1905.

The Broncho Pacing In Great Form

Illinois Bred Mare Looks Stellar Side Wheeler of Season.

That game pacer The Broncho is having a gay time in her class this season. This speedy bay mare has been hauling down the money with surprising regularity, and she forecasted her exploits at the opening of her campaign at Libertyville, Ill.

The Broncho began at Libertyville by winning the fastest race of the year up to that time, defeating Baron Grattan, Bolivar and Citation in 2:05 and 2:05 1/2. Reports say that she stepped these two miles very easily and could have undoubtedly paced right at her record, 2:03 1/2, had she been asked to do so.

THE BRONCHO, 2:03 1/2.

The Broncho looks to be a coming two minute pacer, and there is no doubt but what she will be the greatest pacer of the year.

It may prove of interest to give a brief history of her career. The Broncho (2:03 1/2) is a small bay mare, foaled in 1898, and she is by Stormell, 11:07 1/2, dam Luxora, by Autocrat, Jr., 24:07 1/2, granddam Twilight, by Lakeland-Abdullah, 35:1. She was bred by R. D. Adams of Dixon, Ill., who broke her and paced her one season, giving her a record of 2:17 1/2. Then she was placed in the hands of that really great trainer, Charles Dean of Palatine, Ill., who has made her one of the greatest pacers the turf ever knew.

All of The Broncho's laurels have been gained in the heat of battle, and she has never yet been sent after "tin cup" or special rewards, making her showing all the more remarkable.

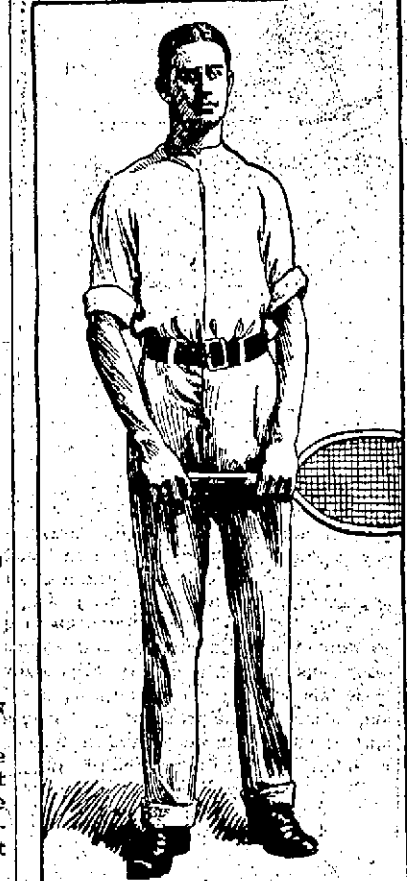

She is equally at home on either a mile or half mile track, and she has met and defeated some of the best horses in training. She is barely fifteen hands high and is a sort of pocket edition, but she is as strong and sturdy as a draft horse and as courageous as a lion, and her speed is practically unlimited.

Charles Dean said last winter that he had never yet driven her when he thought she had reached her limit and that whenever he called on her she appeared to have some speed in reserve.

Wright in the tournament at Newport, R. I., was one of the most sensational feats of recent years in tennis.

Clothier continued undefeated all through the all comers' meet at Newport, thus winning the honor of meeting Wright in the challenge match. Strangely enough, he defeated the champion in three straight sets, Wright being practically outclassed from start to finish.

Kentucky Girl Who Killed a Man Roams Wild Through Field and Forest.

DOGS HER SOLE COMPANIONS

For Months She Terrorizes Kentucky Country Folk Until Fever Lays Her Low and She Is Caught and Put in Poorhouse.

Ill with malaria fever, Jean Audley, the "beautiful maniac," and mysterious woman who for many weeks had been riding through the woods and villages of Kentucky on a sorrel pony, followed by a pack of dogs of all sizes and descriptions and with an army carbine across the saddle, her belt filled with smaller weapons, is awaiting developments in the Harrison county (Ind.) poorhouse. If her health improves she will either be adjudged insane and placed in an asylum or be sent to Cumberland Gap, Ky., where she, according to an alleged confession, killed a man. Her illness is due to exposure.

For several weeks a woman answer, the description of Jean Audley was seen in the wilder parts of Kentucky riding a pony at high speed. In addition to her dogs and weapons, she had a cooking outfit, including a coffee pot and a frying pan. At night she camped in lonely places or took possession of a barn. Occasionally she called at a farmhouse to demand food for her horse, self and dogs. She never spoke on such occasions of anything outside of her business. She always displayed her weapons freely.

She was always on the alert. Farmers tried many times to approach her, but she, rifle in hand, forced them to retreat. They tried to surprise her at night, but if she was asleep the barking of her dogs woke her, and weapons in hand, she would demand who approached and what was wanted, only to order the curious one to depart if he cared to live.

In the morning she would start again on her flying journey. Hair flying, she rushed through villages, past farmhouses, frightening women and children, who thought her possessed by some unearthly powers. Whenever she passed in daytime the farmers spoke about her at night, and all kinds of superstitious stories were related in connection with her appearance.

When she reached the Ohio river at Brandenburg, she crossed to Indiana. Here, after roving for several weeks, she stopped at the farm of Charles Lang, near Corydon, and asked a place to stay overnight. Her hair was tangled, her clothing tattered, her trappings worn by the weather, her face showed fatigue, her dogs were almost skeletons, and the pony was ready to drop. Lang gave her a place to sleep and food for the pony and the dogs.

Early the following morning the family was awakened by cries of "Help!" When Lang reached the woman, he found her fainting. With the help of members of his family Lang took her into the house and sent for the physician and for the authorities. The physician declared that she was suffering with malaria fever. Lee Hotell, trustee of Scott township, ordered her removed to the asylum for the poor.

When the "beautiful maniac," as she is called, was brought to the poorhouse, the authorities made efforts to probe into her mysterious roving career. When questioned as to her identity and the cause of her actions, she was at times very communicative and at other times she would not answer.

To Andrew Stonecipher, keeper of the poorhouse, she volunteered that her home is in the Cumberland mountains of Kentucky and that she killed a man near Cumberland Gap. When questioned for further details of the alleged murder, she refused to answer.

Worst Accident in History.

The most awesome accident in history was the fall of a Roman amphitheater in the time of Tiberius. Fifty thousand people were crushed.

Didn't Belong to Colorado.

In the early days of Leadville there was a singular character living by the name of Major Martin McGinnis. The major was the important man of the camp, and when any distinguished parties came to the city they were received by Major Martin McGinnis and presented with the freedom of the camp on a gold plate. The French government sent three mining engineers over to examine and to report upon the mineral deposits of this locality. They were received by Major Martin McGinnis, who put them in carriages and took them around the camp. As they were going up California gulch the Frenchmen suddenly jumped out of the carriage and commenced to hammer and chisel upon a large black bowlder that lay alongside the road. The major watched them gesticulating to one another, and he finally said to the interpreter: "What do they mean? What are they talking about?" The interpreter said, "They say that rock don't belong here." The major said: "The devil it don't! You say to those foreigners that I won't stand for them coming over here and running down our country. Tell them that they can find anything anywhere in Colorado."

The Frenchmen were right, however, for this black rock was of meteoric and had fallen from the skies.—Leadville Herald-Democrat.

The First Bathing Machine.

There does not seem to be much doubt that the first bathing machine was seen at Margate and that it was the invention of a worthy Quaker named Beale, who placed his hopeful invention on the Margate beach in 1750. "The public are obliged to Benjamin Beale, one of the people called Quakers, for the invention," writes the author of "A Short Description of the Isle of Thanet," published in 1706. But it was the old story, the public became grateful after the inventor had been ruined by his enterprise. His successors had reaped the harvest. Old Benjamin Beale's widow could remember in her last days the first family that ever resorted to Margate for the purpose of bathing being carried into the sea in a covered cart. In 1803 Beale's machines were one of the institutions of Margate. It was alarmingly claimed for them that "they may be driven to any depth into the sea by careful guides."—T. P.'s London Weekly.

The Busiest Street in the World.

West street in New York presents a network of piers and docks for its whole length. Most of the great steamship and railway transportation companies have their pier terminals there, and other steamship companies have built their terminals on the New Jersey shore opposite, so that all transatlantic and a large share of the continental travelers must cross West street in coming to or leaving the city. When one considers the great number of short trip travelers, including commuters, who daily make their way in and out of the metropolis across this busy thoroughfare a faint idea of its importance may be gained. Manhattan Island has thirty-two miles of water front.—John P. Fritts in Leslie's Weekly.

This Was in 1824.

English opinion of the United States in 1824, from the standpoint of the fashionable London set, is shown in the extract from the correspondent of John Whishaw: "You must have read some time since in the papers of a few young fashionable men, Mr. Stanley (Lord Derby's grandson), Messrs. Wortley and Denison, ministerial members, and La-bouchere, a nephew of Mr. Baring, having sailed for New York with the intention of making a tour of the United States. These gentlemen were thought very wild and much disapproved of by the west end of the town, and disappointment and disgust were universally predicted."

DO YOU WANT AN ELCHEE?

An "ELCHEE" is someone who is empowered to represent you--your ENVOY--someone whom you have sent on a mission or an errand for you. The word is Persian.

There would never have been an "Elchee" in Persia, or elsewhere, but for the formerly awkward fact that one man cannot be in two or more places at the same time.

This "formerly awkward fact" is not particularly annoying in these days--for we have found a way to make our "Elchees" both impersonal and numerous--as numerous as any occasion of life could ever require.

Nowadays we make a classified advertisement our "Elchee," and within the space of twenty-four hours we have been present, BY ENVOY, at a thousand firesides--in a thousand private offices. Our story has been told, by proxy, to A MAJORITY of the people in the city who could, by any means, be induced to take an interest in it.

If you keep your "WANT AD, ELCHEE" busy enough, you will be able to sit at home or at the office and have your errands done, your quests pursued. You may find employment, lodgers, lodgings, lost things, tenants, buyers of things you have to sell, sellers of things you want to buy--if you
